The pastor first arranged for a meeting at his home but the officer declined and they met at a different park than where he left the note, the Star-Tribune reported. After that, Badger suggested they meet at an adult video store where Badger told the undercover officer "he had been there several times to perform sexual acts," the newspaper reported.

While in the officer's SUV, Badger asked him for oral sex and started to take off his pants, police said. That's when the officer turned the car radio to country music, which was the signal for the other officers to arrest Badger, the newspaper reported

Badger told police he had a high sex drive and could not control his urges to have sex, the newspaper reported. He told officers he had performed sex at the park before.

He was charged with public indecency, obscene literature and incitement to a crime, the Star-Tribune reported.

A retired 75-year-old Wyoming pastor's high sex drive was the reason for his gay sex escapades, he told police after being arrested in a sting Sunday.

Police said Rev. Bryant Badger, who retired after 25 years of serving the First Christian Church in Casper Wyoming, allegedly left a graphic note on a portable toilet at a local park, Casper Lt. Mike Thompson told the Daily News.

He also left his number, and after police received many calls from concerned residents they called Badger and arranged a meeting, Thompson said.

"It was seen by a lot of people," he said.

An undercover officer called Bryant and told him he was willing to do "anything," according to the police report
